SEMINAR ON SUPPLY CHAIN MANAGEMENT

Gone are the days when individual firms competed with each-other for market share and dominance. Rather, groups of companies called supply chains compete with each-other. Now this paradigm shift in the strategy for market dominance has created new challenges and opportunities in terms of employment, managerial tools and techniques and research. With this change in the firms' competitive strategy, new employment opportunities for students of management and business have emerged in great numbers in this area.

The seminar intends to create awareness about the scope of SCM among the management students by first-hand accounts of experiences from vastly experienced SCM practitioners from reputed government and private organizations. This will encourage our students to opt for SCM as a career and encourage them to acquire the required skills for the same.
